Ms Carpentier has spent 25 years in a broad array of roles in the Canadian financial services industry, the last thirteen in the operational risk and 'GRC' arena. Since her retirement from RBC (Royal Bank of Canada) in early 2009, Ms Carpentier has focussed on knowledge-building and company support in the areas of operational risk, enterprise risk and risk governance through risk advisory firm See. See Beyond.... (www.SeeSeeBeyond.com). As a member of RBC's central operational risk group from its inception, she provided leadership for RBC's operational risk management strategy globally. Ms Carpentier has been instrumental in furthering the development of operational risk management practice within the financial services industry through active participation in the RMA (Risk Management Association) and ORX (the Operational Riskdata eXchange Association). She served as the original chair of the RMA KRI Services Steering Committee. As co-chair of the RMA/ORX Joint Working Group, she helped bring the activities of these two risk associations together to establish a common industry framework for discussion and analysis of operational risk information. The outcome of this work, a set of product type and process type taxonomies, was announced by ORX and RMA in 2009. Ms Carpentier is a frequent speaker and lecturer in the areas of operational risk, enterprise risk and risk governance. Ms Carpentier holds an MBA from York University, Toronto and is a Chartered Financial Analyst. She lives and works in Toronto.
