

INSTRUCTOR

James J. McKenna
Rosendale Central Management Corp
Glen Rock, New Jersey

McKenna is the President of Rosendale Central Management Corp., a consultancy providing services to the financial services industry, attorneys, and non-financial corporations. He was formerly a Wachovia executive vice president with extensive experience in commercial lending, loan administration, credit portfolio management, lender training and development, workout, turnaround, crisis management, strategic planning, and management of commercial bank, merchant bank, and trade financing activities, both domestically and internationally. Prior bank employers include Irving Trust Company, Bank of New York, and First Fidelity. McKenna is an instructor for various financial institutions on a wide range of banking and lending topics. He earned his B.A. degree in economics from St. John's University, N.Y.C., and completed his MBA course work in finance at New York University, N.Y.C.